Neuropsychological Testing Resources

What is a Neuropsychological Evaluation?

A neuropsychological evaluation (“neuropsych testing”) assesses how a child learns, thinks, and processes information. It can help identify concerns such as ADHD, learning differences, and other developmental needs, and provides recommendations for support at home and in school.

What’s in This Packet

A list of agencies that provide neuropsychological evaluations for children and adolescents.

How to Use This Guide

- Review the list to find options that may work for your family
- Contact your insurance provider to ask which agencies are covered in your area
- Reach out to 2–3 agencies (waitlists are common)

When contacting agencies, ask about:

- Insurance coverage (MassHealth or private)
- Wait times
- Referral requirements

If you need assistance at any point, please don’t hesitate to contact our
